D&C 135:5. What Is a Testator? Why Is Death Required to Put a Testament in Force?

A testator is one who leaves a will or testament. The will is valid only after the testator's death. While the testator lives, the will has no legal power. Gospel usage of the word testator denotes one who provides to man the witness of God's covenants. These covenants are his testament to mankind. The Prophet Joseph Smith's testament was that God had revealed through him the seal power by which "all covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations," shall be in force and recognized as valid in the eternal worlds (D&C 132:7). In a special way, the death of the testator places a seal of truth upon his testament. Had Joseph and Hyrum Smith been the frauds that some have claimed, they would not have been willing to die to seal their testimony with their blood. In death, their testament is vindicated.

The Lord revealed to President Brigham Young that it was necessary for the Prophet to seal his testimony with his blood (see D&C 136:39). Eld

The raucous levee was a different sort of world that still retained sophisticated ways of the original settlers. Wealthy fur merchants rivaled one another in erecting residences sumptuously furnished with mahogany, crystal, velvet. One leading trader, Auguste Au, who as a young man had cut trees for the first settlement in 174, lived in a mansion with about floor, his servants were

By 1820 the city supported three newspapers and a bookstore. For those whose taste ran to more lively entertainment, 50 plays were put on that year, and there were enough dances and parties to keep four hairdressers and several professional musicians profitably employed.

But even the refined lives of the elite suffered an occasional outburst of danger. Unlike waterfront ruffians who
